WINE & SPIRITS

All Colmello wines are the results of a skilful blend of masses of the same wine aged in steel and in amphora. Our amphorae are in microporous ceramic, of the latest generation: it is not the technique "of the ancient Romans", but modern and avant-garde winemaking technique.

The wine, in the amphora, increases in expression and elegantly evolves reaching the maximum of his personality while keeping the freshness and minerality intact. Just like in wooden barrels, the wine is found inside an environment, in controlled contact, with oxygen. Unlike with wood, however, there is no transfer of tannin or flavor by the container. The result is grapes to the maximum purity and at maximum power!

Friuli is a region where various elements are mixed together: mountains, hills, flat land and sea shores.

The Estate spreads over an area of 21 hectares, 15 used for the vines; all facing south with heights that varies between 40 and 80 meters above sea level.

The grapevines are equally divided between DOP Collio and Isonzo appellations, which, though they lie close are made of completely different soils.

Tenuta dei Mori winery, was founded in a small village in the heart of Umbria region, along the Via del Cantico ('Way of the Song'), the road running from Todi to Assisi, renowned for its vineyards.

The wines are produced on 30 acres of mainly clay and loam soil, in a sunny location among the hills and they are the traditional product of our land, liberally reinterpreted through a modern perspective.

The wine products are made from blends of different native grape varieties, such as Sangiovese and Trebbiano Spoletino, and non-typically regional varieties such as Alicante, Refosco and Vermentino, assembled together after identifying the strengths and characteristics obtained from the grapes during the season.

All the efforts and care of Tenuta dei Mori are aimed at obtaining a beautiful, healthy vineyard that offer quality grapes, even because "good wine is made in the vineyard".

As you can see from the labels, the clouds depicted on the bottles represent the connection between Mankind and Nature, both just as simple and variable as a good wine can be.

Chiorri, was founded at the end of the 19th century in Sant'Enea, a small village a few kilometres from the centre of Perugia, in Umbria region, overlooking the enchanting landscape of the Tiber Valley. What defines the most the corporate culture is a deep sense of family in which the know-how, handed down from generation to generation, is interwoven with the Umbrian winemaking tradition, weaving the threads of the winery history. A perfect and indissoluble bond of tradition and territoriality that gives birth to excellent wines with Controlled Designation of Origin (DOC) of Colli Perugini and IGT Umbria.

Chiorri pays a special attention to its vineyards and cultivate them with respect to their own characteristics. They enjoy the favour of the hills which, due to their exposure, soil and weather conditions, are highly suited to wine production. The winery cultivates mainly indigenous wines of the territory, but also international ones: as for the white barried grapes, Grechetto, Malvasia, Pinot Grigio, Viognier and as for the red barried grapes, Sangiovese, Sagrantino, Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon.

Santoiolo winery is a company surrounded by vineyards in a wonderful place in Umbria region, where the grape is the great protagonist. The land where the company is founded, once submerged by the sea that is now retreated, has the speciality that digging just a few centimeters below the soil surface, it is possible to find shells and marine fossils that give the idea of a beach, after a storm. The minerality and richness of the wines perfectly reflect this signature soil profile.

Santoiolo main idea is to work the entire year to let the grape reach its perfect status in order to harvest it, as soon as it is ready, and transport it into the cellar to be transformed into wine. This process allows the product to retain its integrity, without any request of chemical agents necessary to avoid undesired alterations.

In viticulture, the philosophy of 'little and good' is that they respect and follow, so their practice is to restrict the plant to produce less fruit. Santoiolo plants the vines very closely together, and prune them quite severely, both in the winter and summer season, training the vine to grow just enough fruit per vine, producing only great quality bottles.

Immersed in the green of the Umbrian hills, situated in the area of the middle valley of the Tevere, Villa Bucher estate is located with panoramic view over the heart of Italy.

Extended over 65 hectares, 6.5 of which designed to grapes production, for its position it benefits of a microclimate favourable to vine. The well-balanced harmony of climatic factors such as sun, light, air, ventilation and rainfall produces fruits capable of generating high quality wines, true interpreters of the peculiarities of the territory.

The various types of produced grapes are all hand-picked and vinified separately, in order to derive from each the best quality result. The resulting wines are endowed with strong personality, great structure and are gifted with longevity; for this reason, the red wines in particular, are well-suited for long aging.

VILLA BUCHER

The wine region around Villa Bucher has proven volcanic soil for a unique character in the wines. Volcanic soil is considered among some of the best for growing winegrapes. In general, volcanic soils encourage the development of desirable flavor and texture compounds in winegrapes; such soils are porous and provide good drainage, which causes grapevines to grow deep to seek nutrients.

Soil absolutely affects a wine's flavor, but it's usually thought to do so indirectly. The way a soil retains water, reflects or absorbs sunlight affects how vines develop and, therefore, the resulting wine's flavor.

Volcanic wines have a deep and ripe minerality, and they can age for a very long time. The aroma, structure and acidity content of the grapes is perfect. Also the ratio of tartaric, malic and citric acid content is really stable every year.

Parvus Ager from the Latin "Piccolo Campo" is the new generation of an ancient family of winemakers. Grown with the pungent smell of fermenting must, with the sound of the presses in the cellar and then in the countryside, amidst the songs and laughter of the women who harvest the grapes.

Our vinifications are implemented with new and high quality systems, with the aim of checking, at all stages: cultivation, production and vinification, the quality, genuineness and sustainability of our wine, a concentrate of all those wise teachings that our grandparents passed on to us and that we have breathed, listened to and lived our whole life. The "Parvus Ager project" begins with the complete renewal of existing cultures, through the introduction of high quality noble vines. In our crops we maintain low yields per hectare, selecting the bunches and grapes both in the vineyard and in the cellar.

From the richness of the soil, the nobility of the vines, combined with careful and constant care in cultivation, our wines are born, sensational and unique, like every living being.

Since 1929 Silvestri is a story of family and passion, between tradition and innovation, with attention to detail we welcome you into our world.

The beating heart of Lazio, a fertile and wild territory that for millennia has offered, to those who know how to tame it, safety and products of the earth that are unique in the world. The Castelli Romani are represented in the reflections of these wines extracted from selected grapes. A flight among the fronds of the trees of these hills that gently drink in the two most beautiful lakes of our territory.

The cellars are located in the heart of the Castelli Romani, where the wine culture and passion for the traditions of the past keep their flavour intact. Upon reservation we receive groups for wine tastings with our own wines and sparkling wines and local specialities.

Love and land, life and vines, roots and terroir, experience and future, know-how and technology, courage and emotions, passion and family.

Cantina Gentile the great wines from the Murgia Hills. The red and white wines we produce are the result of a great commitment that starts from our winemakers who follow the vine in all of the phases of its growth. They take care of it by harvesting it manually.

There are currently 400 members wine-growers in the cooperative with a production of excellent grapes. Modern techniques are employed in the wine-making process with controlled temperatures during fermentation and with a modern bottling plant. The wines are vinified in vitrified cement vats at controlled temperatures. In the range there are wines fermented and then matured in small oak barriques.

The production area, with a strong wine vocation, has a calcareous soil (rich in mineral salts and poor in water) combined with the typical alberello and espalier forms of vines which produce high quality grapes.

The grapes which arrive at a right ripeness into the cellar, are carefully vinified by expert oenologists who use modern and innovative techniques, always respecting the ancient traditions.

The land of BOSCO - Soc. Coop. Agr. particularly well exposed to the sun and touched by a gentle sea breeze, with a convergence of many other favorable elements, has a natural vocation for the production of a noble wine with an intense personality.

The selection of the grapes produced is aimed at the production of DOP, IGT wines.

Modern processing techniques have allowed for greater control over the production phases, thereby enhancing local aromas.

The Cooperative boasts viticultural partners who are dedicated by tradition to the cultivation of vineyards.

Bosco produced highest quality extra virgin olive oil, free of olfactory defects and releases fruity aromas and a pleasant hint of fresh.

Isula, the roots of Ísula lie in the ancient wine tradition of Pantelleria, an island of amazing contrasts, in which the natural conditions, the climate, the physical and chemical properties of the territory offer the possibility to create wines that are unique in their organoleptic properties and nutritional characteristics. The techniques of cultivation and processing of grapes, typical of the island of Pantelleria, have been recognized as “heroic agriculture” for the tenacity and passion of the island’s inhabitants, capable of recreating a perfect balance between man and nature.

Among the grape varieties grown today on the island and within the company, the Zibibbo (also known as Moscato d’Alessandria) stands out, from whose skillful processing of only grapes, Passito Sciaghibir is born. Our zibibbo vineyard, is cultivated with the classic “pantesco sapling” technique, which allows the plant to grow in spite of the adverse climatic conditions (scarce rain and persistent wind), protected by dry lava stone walls, recognized as an Intangible Heritage of Humanity by Unesco.

The Cantina Sociale di Oliena's wine cellar was born in 1950 when a group of vine growers in Oliena wished to promote Cannonau wine. The work culture and tradition of being together meant that they chose to build the wine cellar as a cooperative.

This added momentum to their entrepreneurship which, as well as having strong social implications, prioritised product quality over profit from the very beginning.

By pairing traditional methods with more modern technology, such as wine-making at a controlled temperature, the Cantina Sociale di Oliena has been working with grapes in the form of a partnership with approximately 100 members.

The Cantina Sociale di Oliena aims to spread their wine culture all over the world and propagate the crucial idea and awareness of "drinking well" together, as well as their typically Italian quest for beauty.

They have always invested in the quality of their wines and seek to teach consumers to recognise this quality.

Founded in 1953, Cantina della Vernaccia di Oristano was born in a unique territory of rare beauty. Leader of the promotion and consecration of the Vernaccia di Oristano in all of Italy and beyond the national boundaries, Cantina della Vernaccia inherited more than fifty years of tradition in the production of high-quality wines, and in the last decades also developed through the enhancement of other local grape varieties which are peculiar to the territory such as Nieddera, and through the production of already well-known Sardinian varieties like Vermentino, Cannonau and Monica. The vineyard, owned by the associates and run with great care, is provided with modern technologies. With the help of an external consultant which supports the winery's winemaker, in the last years the Cantina della Vernaccia di Oristano has undertaken a path of innovation and development, in search for the highest and most authentic quality expression of the territory itself.

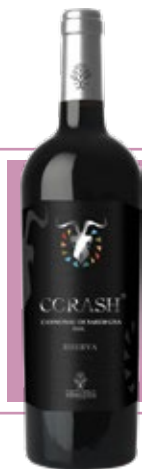

Thus the wine portfolio developed and expanded comprising a complete range of sparkling, white, rosé and red wines.
